its characteristic themes, which come with a man's maturer years. It suggests the possibility of more and still riper work, should the writer determine to give us another volume of his verses.

ORIGINAL PHOTOGRAPHS TAKEN ON THE BATTLEFIELDS DURING THE CIVIL WAR. By Mathew B. Brady and Alexander Gardner. Published by Edward B. Eaton, Hartford, Conn. Price of the Album, $3.00.

This Album contains a reproduction of photographs selected from seven thousand original negatives made while the Civil War was going on, now the property of Edward Bailey Eaton of Hartford. Mr. Eaton has made of these photographs, with his comments upon them, an extremely interesting album, not only from the point of view of art, but also from that of history. The superb pictures as explained by him throw most instructive light on many phases of the Civil War, and no one can turn over carefully the pages without having a clearer and fuller idea of that terrific struggle, the effects of which are still so sadly felt in many ways. The author is a strong advocate of peace and of pacific methods of adjusting disputes, and has endeavored to make his book, while dealing with the horrible realism of war, contribute to the development of the growing stream of enlightened public sentiment which is in the near future to make war intolerable and impossible.
